Hebron Orchestra Family,

Every time I hear one of our orchestras I get excited. Some of our young musicians are discovering music for the first time. They are learning how sound works, how an instrument works, how their fingers work, how a team works. Others are further along, reflecting upon the journey they've taken so far. Whether new or seasoned, this is always true: With music the possibilities are endless. Music can express anything. Our patriotism, our sense of adventure. Our adolescence or maturity. Our frustration, uncertainty, and anger. Our eagerness and glee. Our respect or defiance. The tangible and intangible. You can listen to the same song a hundred times, and then on the next time it might have a different meaning.

If you count up the years, I've completed middle school three times over. You might've been relieved to escape it once. I love it. Middle school is the moment of transformation. Our students arrive in our classrooms as children and leave as young adults. I'm thrilled that music can be a part of this transformation. It is a great privilege and responsibility to have each of these amazing students in class every day.

I described middle school as a single moment because when it's over it will have felt like one. Now along with many of my students I guess I'm a freshman too. We're still figuring a lot of this out. But for now we can't wait for all of us to get together and share some music.
